GIVES PLAN TO SUBSTITUTE FOR THE INSTITUTES

Superintendent of State Education Says $800,000
Could Be Saved

ECONOMIC SUGGESTION

Would Not Have to Pay the Teachers $4 a Day for Attendance

HARRISBURG, July 12.—Several bills introduced at the special session of the Legislature would abolish teachers' institutes in some of the school districts of the State as a means of bringing about economy.

Many school districts have little or no available funds and some are living on advances made from the full payments of State moneys to the districts.

An aggregate of $800,000 could be saved, Superintendent James N. Rule, of the Department of Public Instruction, said today, if all counties use a substitute plan provided by the school code for institutes.

The code provides that all four classes of school districts may hold institutes at different times and different localities within a district instead of holding the annual county institutes at the county seats.

Prior to 1931 the first, second and third class districts, located in the cities and boroughs of the State, had this right and last year the same right was extended to the fourth-class districts.

County superintendents are given the right to provide a program for teacher training to be followed at the local meetings in various parts of each county where the fourth, or smallest, class districts are located.

Teachers would be placed at no expense to attend the institutes and the school districts would not have to pay the teachers $4 a day for attendance.

Report Giant Shyok Dam Crashes, Endangering Town

BOMBAY, July 12.—(INS)—The giant Shyok dam, built to hold back 700,000,000 tons of water on the Shyok River, in Kashmir Province, was reported to have burst today, releasing a gigantic flood racing down the slopes of the Himalayan Mountains and endangering the town of Skarda.

Extensive floods and damage were feared throughout the vicinity of Skarda, located at the juncture of the Shyok and Indus rivers.

The great dam, 10 miles long and 1200 yards wide, and 140 feet deep, is located 16,000 feet up in the Himalayas. The dam burst once previously, giving way in 1928 and causing tremendous damage.

Shaw Says Youths Must Be "Liars" to Succeed

NEW YORK, July 12.—(INS)—Only as "shameless liars" can the youth of today succeed in diplomacy, publicity or selling, George Bernard Shaw said in a radio address from London which was rebroadcast throughout America.

"I am afraid we must make the world honest before we can honestly tell our children that honesty is the best policy," the famous playwright declared.

He said he himself was successful because he followed the maxim of "When in Rome, do as the Romans do," and not because of any "moral superiority."

Station Platform Afire Third Time in 18 Months

Fire, this morning, for the third time within the past 18 months destroyed a portion of the platform at the P. R. R. station here. The loss is small.

The blaze originated at about the same spot as in the other two fires and the second and third fires have been at about the same time of the morning.

The platform on the eastbound side was ablaze in front of the stairway and the planks burn readily.

"All fires have been attributed to sparks from a passing locomotive."

The platform is elevated and sparks falling between the planks are fanned by a draft from beneath and burn for a long time before they are discovered. The underpieces are treated with creosote and make ready fuel.

Judges

PLEAD GUILTY CASES

Three divorces were granted today in the Court of Common Pleas of Bucks county at Doylestown, upon payment of costs. UPPER DELAWARE NOW OPEN TO OCEAN VESSELS IS FOR FIRST SEASON MINUS RIVER PASSENGER STEAMERS STATES WRITER IN A TRENTON PAPER

Elma Lawson Johnston Tells of the Delights of Residents on Two Shores of Delaware as Trips Were Made Between the Towns on the Olden Boats — Names Recall Many Very Pleasant Memories

The Delaware River now open to ocean vessels as far as Trenton is for the first season minus river passenger steamers past here, according to Elma Lawson Johnston writing in Trenton Sunday Times-Advertiser of July 10th.

The form of summer recreation between the New Jersey capital and Philadelphia, with occasional stops at Bristol and Burlington Island, seems to be a thing of the past. This despite the fact the Federal Government "at enormous expense has deepened the channel" and "Trenton taxpayers have spent thousands of dollars to erect an elaborate modern marine terminal," states the writer.

In her most interesting article regarding the Delaware River and other waterways through and past Trenton, the author continues:

"This lack of appreciation of the Delaware River and the other waterways in Trenton is curious. Not only the sportsmen, but citizens in general seem not to realize what the river, the Delaware and Raritan Canal and its feeder and Sanhican Creek, running like a network throughout the city, could mean to Trenton. A few years ago an architect and city planner from the more progressive West was visiting Trenton. In conversation with Mayor Donnelly he remarked that the large busy cities in his part of the country would be willing to spend millions to get or keep the chain of waterways that cross or partly encircle Trenton. He pointed out what assets they are as recreation centres for swimming and boating; and as parks that, since all of Trenton's streams at some point or other run through congested areas, would offer welcome breathing spots for people living in the built-up districts. Improved as the canal feeder has been between Calhoun street and Prospect street, the streams would bring beauty into regions where ugliness too often predominates. They give also, he added, ideal settings for such a civic centre as that which has grown up around the Old Barracks and the new War Memorial."

"But for some reason or other, probably because they have had them so long that they fail to appreciate them, Trentonians are blind to the advantages its river, canal and Sanhican Creek afford. It was not always so. Mayor Donnelly and a few ardent advocates of water transportation dream of the days when Trenton will be a port for ocean-going liners, and the present peaceful Marine Terminal will be alive with craft from distant ports, bringing cargoes varied enough to meet the many manufacturing and business needs of a growing industrial city like this. But during practically all of the 19th century, Trenton actually was a port. Not for ocean vessels, of course, but for regular lines of steamers that operated daily in summer time between here and Philadelphia. At one time there were several lines competing and both passenger and produce—famed Jersey peaches, for instance—were carried up and down stream."

Not only did residents on the Pennsylvania and New Jersey shores decades ago see possibilities of the stream for business but likewise for pleasure. Rowing was a popular sport, and about 25 years ago was enjoyed much more than canoeing. Many have been the devotees of yachts and sailboats in years past on the upper Delaware. Yachts are still much in demand however. But "far surpassing the number of persons who enjoyed the river aboard their own yachts," continues the story, "are those who patronized the various steamships that operated on the Delaware." "Undoubtedly the most popular of the river steamers was the Edwin Forrest. (Continued on Page 4)

FIREMEN SEEK REVENUE FROM OUTLYING SECTION

90% of Calls Received by Morrisville Fire-Fighters
Are in Township

PLAN TO BE SUBMITTED

MORRISVILLE, July 12.—Because 90 per cent. of the fire calls answered by the two local fire companies are in the townships, the local department is considering a plan to be submitted for approval by Common Council whereby some revenue will be received from the outlying districts which receive this protection.

It has been pointed out that the Morrisville taxpayers pay a fire tax of 1½ mills to provide and maintain the fire department, and while the local department is willing to lend assistance where necessary, it is not fair, firemen say, to the residents of Morrisville who pay this tax to give all this service to the outlying districts without receiving and recompense.

Some of the councilmen believe the townships which receive this protection should either levy a small tax or pay out of the general treasury to Morrisville borough or the Morrisville department a certain fixed sum each year.

After the firemen decide on the best plan and the matter is approved by council, it will be presented to the township commissioners.

It has been reported that the firemen use considerable gasoline, chemicals and hose, aside from wear and tear on the fire apparatus and the services of men at these out-of-town fires. It was only recently considerable loss was damaged at one of the big fires in Falls Township, and not a penny was received to replace the damage.

EXPECT ADJOURNMENT

Harrisburg, July 12.—In the face of open floor activities which appeared to discount every possible theory of early adjournment, reports were widely circulated today that legislative leaders had assembled a relief vehicle that should ride to enactment by the end of next week. Both branches meeting last night went through routine sessions, but failed in themselves to indicate whether the third week of the special session would bring the legislators any closer to their goal.

GUARDS DISAPPEAR

Jacksonville, Fla., July 12.—Disappearance of two guards stationed at the Sunbeam Prison Camp where Arthur Mailfert, 19 year old New Jersey youth met his "torture death," today forced postponement of the Grand Jury investigation into that tragedy.

The grand jury, led by A. F. Gorman, was taking evidence from the other prisoners at the Sunbeam Camp and the two guards were being sought by subpoena servers to give testimony, but could not be found. The state of Florida, pressed by public sentiment over the death of Mailfert, closed the Sunbeam Camp and transferred the convicts to the state prison at Ral-ford.

COMMITTEE NAMED

Harrisburg, July 12.—State officers charged with the investigation of charges against W. D. B. Alney, Public Service Commission chairman today had the co-operation of the State Senate in making the inquiry. After voting to table for the second time, the Governor's communication in the matter, and the report of yesterday's public hearing, the Senate reversed its attitude and an hour later recalled the communication and voted without dissent to appoint a committee of seven to work in conjunction with Attorney General William A. Schnader in sifting the charges. Named to the committee were the following Senators: Rial, Westmoreland; Dennis, Dauphin; Buckman, Bucks; Falls, Philadelphia; Cozen, Allegheny; Clippinger, Franklin, all Republicans; and Roberts, Northampton, Democrat.

WM. MORRIS IS PAROLED

DOYLESTOWN, July 12.—Samuel C. Rush, of 1114½ Liberty street, Allentown, who told a Court officer that he "was off women for life," was yesterday directed by Judge Calvin S. Boyer to pay $4 a week to his wife, Emma B. Rush, of Sellersville, and to pay the costs of the proceeding which brought him into court on a charge of desertion and non-support. He was also directed to enter in his own recognizance in the sum of $300, to comply with the order of court. The money is to be used for the support of a minor son, George Rush.

Peter Smith, of Pipersville R. D., charged with desertion and non-support was before Judge Boyer yesterday on the information of his wife, Virginia Smith. After hearing testimony, the Court directed that Smith pay the costs and directed that he take his wife and child to his father's home, where they have agreed to live together.

William Jones, of Philadelphia, one of a group of boys who stole bicycles from a Richboro school some time ago, was before the court yesterday. Judges Keller and Boyer directed that he be released on probation for two years on condition that he pay the costs at $10 a month.

Other defendants charged with the same offense were disposed of some time ago.

Disposes of Four Cases in Quick Time at Municipal Building

THREE ARE UNDER BAIL

Four cases were quickly disposed of last night when Justice of Peace Edward Lynn held court in the Municipal Building, here, and completed his court in just 16 minutes.

The cases involved two men accused of selling intoxicating beverages and two men charged with operating automobiles while under the influence of liquor.

Vito Caro, Mansion and Beaver streets, whose place was raided Saturday night, was held in $500 bail for a further hearing July 18th. Caro's place was visited by the police, Chief Jones testified, and a quantity of alleged alcohol was found in a cooking pot in the kitchen. It is being tested now by chemists. Caro is not a citizen of the United States, being a native of Italy.

Michael Bradley, Spruce street, whose place was also raided Saturday night, was held in $500 bail for a further hearing when a report is received from the chemist.

Richard Youmans, Maple Shade, was fined $13.50 for reckless driving. Youmans was arrested by Bristol police when he was seen operating his car in a zig-zag fashion on Mulberry street. He was examined by a physician who reported that the man had been drinking but not to an excessive extent. The drunken driving charge was not pressed.

William P. Dignan, City Farms, Byberry, was held in $500 bail for court on a drunken driving charge. The arrest was made by State Highway Patrol, South Langhorne. Dignan is said to have driven along the Hulmeville road in such a fashion that he drove all others off the highway. A group of six motorists, it is said, had to leave the highway to avoid an accident.

BETTER ENFORCEMENT

Two years of Federal prohibition enforcement under the department of justice cannot be said to have made prohibition more popular with the people but they have unquestionably been marked by less scandal among the enforcement forces, by more arrests and convictions, and by more general satisfaction with enforcement methods.

Colonel Woodcock, who has headed the bureau since its inception just two years ago, is justified in claiming for his force a vast improvement in morale, conduct, training and efficiency. Success has largely crowned his efforts to end objectionable tactics by his men liable to create prejudice against the service.

It speaks well for the service that the percentage of convictions in the Federal courts was 89.6 per cent. Obviously evidence was carefully obtained and cases carefully prepared.

No claim has been made for the new system that it has diminished liquor law violations or increased respect for law, but it is evident that the system is held in more respect than was its predecessor. This change turned out to be a happy move for President Hoover, whose prohibition worries have been less because of it.

MORATORIUM SUCCESSFUL

If the proof of the pudding is in the eating, the Hoover moratorium was wholly successful. Intended to clarify the situation abroad and to carry Europe through a grave financial and economic crisis, it accomplished just that before its termination a few days ago.

The end of the moratorium year found Germany and France, in complete sympathy and understanding, discussing the reparations question. Earlier misunderstandings creating a crisis in the negotiations had already been cleared up to the satisfaction of both.

Out of the discussions is expected to come an agreement under which Germany will establish a fund intended partly to offset continued obligations of Germany's creditors to pay war debts to the United States, partly to be used for the general economic reconstruction of Europe. For the present the other powers will ask only that Germany post a bond with the World Bank.

The boy had swum from the beach to Mud Island and rested for about ten minutes. He attempted to swim back, and was caught in the middle of the river. Folks on the beach noticed that he was not swimming strongly, then the boy began to cry for help. Robert Johnson and Richard Brackin immediately launched a canoe and managed to lift the boy over the side and take him back to shore.

CHAPTER FIFTY

The bubchen was well. He was chubby and blooming. He reached for the crystal beads around Lily Lou's neck, and pulled on them stupidly.

But he didn't know her. Oh, he didn't know her!

Mrs. Jensen came and took him from Lily Lou's arms, and he reached his little hand, and put it on Mrs. Jensen's shoulder as she bore him away.

Lily Lou wept.

"Pshaw!" Mrs. Jensen said, "don't you care! They never know anybody really at that age."

Lily Lou was not comforted. She told Tony about it when he came in to see her that evening. "Sure, he's too young to remember. Let's eat and you'll feel better," he said.

He had with him a can of antipasto, two tins of anchovies and a long loaf of Italian bread and half a pound of Swiss cheese.

She made coffee and they feasted.

"Too bad Maxie is out. She'll miss the party."

"I can't be sorry," Tony said, with his mouth full of bread and cheese.

"I know you don't like her. But she's been such a good friend to me, Tony. Where do you suppose I'd be living now if it weren't for her? And, oh, Tony, if I just had enough to hire someone to take care of the bubchen here Maxine would even agree to that! And there aren't many that would, now, are there, Tony?"

For answer he swore in his native Italian. Then he got up and began to pace the floor, waving his arms, muttering to himself:

"To think that I—that I would cut off my right arm for you—"

"Tony!"

"Don't stop me, I adore you. You know that. Always—from the first. And now this hellish poverty. Bills, debts, bills! Nothing to offer you."

Lily Lou's mouth twitched. She didn't know whether she was going to laugh or cry. Tony, poor blessed, darling Tony...

He loved her. Not because she was pretty or because she had the beginnings of a career, but just for herself.

She found her eyes filling. "Tony," she said gently, "it does not matter, do you see? Because all that—all love—everything like that—is gone for me. Dear Tony, I loved the man I married, and I couldn't ever—could I ever—"

"You still love him!"

"Yes, I suppose so, Tony. Not that it matters."

"After all that is past you can still love him?"

"Yes, no matter what he did, it doesn't matter, because he's part of me."

She went through the want ads in the papers. But if she did get a job it wouldn't begin to pay for her lessons, with Gwin or anyone else worth while. And how would she eat and what would the bubchen do?

Better to have given up—stayed in California. But if she did that the baby... No, there was no going back. She'd have to go on, somehow.

She borrowed $50 from Wanda Pillsbury, hating herself for asking, hating herself for taking it, hating Wanda for her air of "I never expect to see it again, but I'm kind-hearted and can't refuse—"

That melted in 10 days, what with her share of the month's expenses in the apartment, and the woolly rabbit with the floppy ears that she couldn't resist for the baby.

It was well along in September

now. Gwin came in twice a week, and after the first of October she would work with him every day, and would be able to take the weekly check conscientiously. If she could just hold out until then... Mrs. Jensen's $50 was due on the twenty-first, and there would be extras besides, perhaps $12 or $15.

She had started work in the Metropolitan chorus, three nights a week for rehearsals now, and soon it would be every night. Dramatic lessons, too, and Gwin told her it was time she took fencing and dancing... watching her with that glitter in his eye...

"What's the trouble today?"

"Nothing. It's just that I'm overwhelmed when I realize how unprepared I am—even for the little parts I'm likely to get this season if I'm lucky—"

"What did I tell you when you came here a year ago—all ready to sing Butterflies, and a few other big roles?"

"I know. But I didn't realize then. How could I? When I look back now and think of the hopes I had and how easy it seemed to realize them when I had only a smattering of languages—"

"You mean when you knew no languages and couldn't sing English correctly—"

"Yes, and when I think of all the other girls I've known—lots of them not so young as I, nor so—so pretty—striving—and hoping—Oh, Gwin, aren't you sorry for them? For all the girls who want to be singers, and are going to fail? Aren't you sorry for me too? I am—I could weep for all of us—"

He had been sitting on the piano bench. He rose now and took her gently into his arms.

"Don't say Gwin—it's ridiculous. Say Dwight—"

"Dwight, then—it doesn't matter, does it?"

He held her off at arm's length, studying her. Her sweep of dark, waving hair, her fabulous lily-like skin, her dark brows, her full scarlet lips. "Yes, it matters. It matters a lot. You're not altogether a fool. What's the answer going to be? Oh, you don't have to give it now—this minute. Think it over, that's all. I've got to know."

Lily Lou walked home, prepared her dinner and Maxine's. Canned spinach with a poached egg. Nourishing and cheap.

Her hands laid the table, broke the eggs into the boiling water, scooped them out with a serving spoon.

But she hardly saw them, hardly saw what she was doing.

"Oh, gosh, spinach!" Maxine sighed, coming into the kitchen to sniff of the signs of food. "Well, never mind, I'll eat it. But let's have that can of plum pudding you were going to save for Thanksgiving. I could stand the spinach, if I was sure of the dessert... well! You've been crying. It's a real tragedy all right, if you shed a tear. Tell me, has little Robin got whooping cough, or did your voice leave you?"

All that night Lily Lou tossed in her bed. In the morning she rose at six, to go to Jamaica Park to see the bubchen, before work at the studio. That would help...

Would help her to decide. When she held him in her arms she had courage... courage for anything...

"He's growing out of all his clothes," Mrs. Jensen said, "and I don't know as I can keep him this winter or not, because I'm thinking of getting married again... yes, ma'am, and while my husband ain't opposed to children none, not if they was his, that is, still he don't want a houseful of other people's—"

It was well along in September

"I see," Lily Lou said. Mrs. Jensen was making up her mind for her.

At rehearsal that night the chorus master singled her out to sing a difficult phrase alone.

Afterwards he said, "Very soon, my dear, very soon now, we shall hear from you and next season... minor parts and next season... who knows? Take care of your throat, mind, no straining! Do not force that white tone. Remember that interpretation is the big thing. But I need not say that to a pupil of Gwin."

She told Gwin what he had said, hoping to propitiate him.

He smiled, and said nothing. He was coaching her in two entire roles now, Traviata and Butterfly. She already knew Rosina in The Barber of Seville, and Gilda in Rigoletto, and Mignon and Manon would follow.

Could anyone expect her to give up a chance like that? Wasn't there some way? Some way... but she couldn't think of any...

"What is the matter with you?" Maxine demanded, that night.

"Nothing. Just—finances."

"Fudge! With Gwin to back you, and Tony in line for the big money too, and Nahlman—"

"She's in Europe!"

"Landed today, on the Ile de France. Don't you read your papers?"

Lily Lou piled the unwashed dishes on the sink, grabbed her hat and coat.

"Hotel Ritz," she told the taxi man she hailed at the corner.

Nahlman might not be at the Ritz, of course. She might be out. She might not even consent to see her.

At the desk she asked Nahlman's room number, and was curtly refused the information.

A young man in a creased tweed suit who had followed her to the desk turned away just as she did.

"Hard luck!" he said.

"Yes," she said, trying to answer his blithe smile.

She walked over to a chair to sit for a while. Perhaps some idea would come to her. Perhaps Madame Nahlman might come in, and see her. Or, she might go to a public telephone and call the hotel and ask for Susanne Coin!

She started up. The strange young man was right beside her. "What's the hunch?" he asked her.

"Why—I don't know just what you mean—"

"Aren't you a newspaper woman?"

"Oh my goodness, no!"

He grinned. "My mistake. Thought you were too pretty for it. I had a hunch myself. Thought I might let you in on it."

She dismissed him, smiling, wishing him luck. After a while he strolled over toward the elevators, and Lily Lou gathered courage to go to the public telephone, and ask for Susanne Coin.

"It's Lily Lou! Lily Lou Lansing! I just heard you got in on the Ile de France. I wonder if Madame—"

"Why, Miss Lansing, how glad I am to hear of you... just a moment, Madame heard me call your name. Where are you? Downstairs? Oh, Madame says, come up at once!"

Madame Nahlman embraced her, cried over her, "My dear, how I have missed you! Let me look at you. The same Lily! Oh, I have so much to tell you. Sit down. Such a hard summer. No, sit close to me—now—we can talk—"

So different from the last, cool meeting.

MARKED TAILORED TREND IS SHOWN IN THE FASHION WORLD

By Alice Langeller
(L. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
PARIS—The tailored trend tends to take all tricks in the fashion trade this summer. Even the afternoon dress is tailored at the present moment, coming in heavy silk marocain or crepe, faille or ottoman. The skirt fits closely with the necessary fullness coming near the knees and the short coat very much shouldered in effect and closed at the waistfront by crossing the severe points.

Black and white is perhaps the favorite combination for some of the smartest tailored ensembles, although brown and white is a close runner-up. In one model, contrast is achieved by the black sleeves of the white bodice to which the slotted scarf gives a one-sided effect. A pleated cape comes of the same white crepe de chine as the bodice.

Many of the new summer tailored ensembles are on the shaded plan. A dark green and gray striped silk suit has a skirt, blouse and hat of palest green. A dark grey is combined with lighter printed blouse and little short tailored coat.

The new fabric, riboudigne crepe, is very much favored for the tailored afternoon suit for it has a pleasing coarse weave and suitable texture. In fine pearl-gray which is one of the smartest summer tints, by the way, this crepe makes a charming cocktail frock which may do dance duty as well.

Even lacey chiffon frocks and fragile muslins have a terribly tailored look about them and the most filmy ones have a slightly high-waisted coat, sometimes in dark silk or wool, matching and completing the lacey creation beneath.

ONE-SIDED CONTEST IS WIN FOR EDGELY

BRISTOL TWILIGHT LEAGUE
Schedule for Tonight
CRESCENTS vs. A. O. H.
Result of Last Night
EDGELY, 10; INDEPENDENTS, 3

(By T. M. Juno)

The Edgely A. C. won their second consecutive victory of the second half on St. Ann's field last night as they trounced the Independents, 10-3 in a one-sided contest.

The visitors scored three runs in the second, four in the third, three in the fourth, holding a 10-0 lead before the losers could put across a run.

"Eddie" Tosti started on the hill for the "Indies" and was hit hard from the start. During his stay on the mound he was found for nine hits and seven runs. Antonelli relieved him in the third and pitched fine relief ball, only allowing one hit.

"Jake" Tranotti had an easy time on the mound for the winners because of the lead given to him by his mates. He just lobbed the ball over the plate and even at that the losers could only touch him for five safe hits.

Leo Hibbs with a triple, single and two walks was the leading hitter of the fray. Frankie Dick and Edmund Dugan collected two out of three to be runner up to the Edgely third baseman.

"Ot" Wolvin stood out on the defense, pulling down three line drives that seemed to be headed for extra bases. DiTanna played good ball for the losers.

INJURIES MARK GAME WON BY EDDINGTON IX.

EDDINGTON, July 12.—In a game where injuries prevailed Bensalem Aces went down to defeat before the strong Eddington nine on the local diamond Sunday afternoon. Those injured in the game were: Donald Torpey who was spiked in the first inning; Harry Long, who was "knocked cold" by a pitched ball which hit him in back of the left ear; Mathew Tress received a line drive in the stomach which put him out of the game temporarily.

The pitching and fielding of Eddington was carried out smoothly with the exception of the first baseman, E. Barth, who made the team's three errors. On the Bensalem side, J. Torpey, who started the game as a pitcher was ineffective and lasted in that position only two innings. The thrill of the game came when Donald Torpey pulled his team out of a tight spot with a snappy double play with the assistance of Albert Losink for Bensalem.

The gameness of Donald Torpey to stick in the game under the handicap of an injured leg proved his worth to his team.

Upper Delaware Now Open To Ocean Vessels Now Minus Passenger Craft

There are many who recall with pleasure the trips they made aboard her. There were two ships of that name and the last one, retired from service in 1895, is still vividly remembered.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Vickers entertained on Sunday in honor of their son, Albert's, birthday: Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reichert, Miss Dorothy Vickers, Philadelphia, Mr. McGrath and friends, Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. James Moore entertained on Saturday, Mr. Herman Moore, Philadelphia.

She was, however, only one of a long line of steamboats in service on the Delaware, for dozens had preceded her and many have followed her.

"In fact passenger service on the Delaware goes back to the early years of the eighteenth century. The first ship of which there is record is the Phoenix, built by John Stevens, of the distinguished Hoboken family of engineers and inventors. She was brought around by sea to the Delaware by Robert L. Stevens, and by 1812 was making regular scheduled trips."

"The Phoenix was certainly one of the first, if not the first, of these river steamboats. The ship was a curious affair. She had no wheelhouse, was of queer design and when in motion would throw water as high as her smoke stack. She was built only a few years after the completion of Pilgrimage, which like her sister ship eventually ran to Trenton; the Bristol and the Eagle that plied only between Philadelphia and Burlington and the New Jersey that had its northerly terminus at White Hill below Bordentown.

"As time went on competition between the various lines operating on the river became keen and faster and newer steamers were placed in service each year. Several companies were in the field and the business of river transportation on the Delaware seemed so promising a venture that it even attracted Cornelius Vanderbilt, of New York. With Captain Willdin he started the Dispatch Line and operated the Emerald, disposing of her when the Union and Citizens Lines merged.

"These old ships are today mere names in yellowing newspapers. Not so the Edw. Forrest. The earlier ship of that name was of wooden construction, operating in the early decades of the 19th Century. There is some doubt when the vessels began operations, but a local newspaper for May 8, 1849, records the maiden voyage of one of them.

"The new steamboat, Edw. Forrest, so the item runs, 'built for the special purpose of running daily between Trenton and Philadelphia, made her first trip yesterday. She left Philadelphia at 12 o'clock and reached South Trenton at 2:45 o'clock. She made seven landings. The boat is 168 feet long and has a 26-foot beam. Her cabins are neat and commodious, and she has a comfortable salon on deck. At four o'clock she swung off from the wharf under full headway on her down trip."

"Second in popularity to the old Edw. Forrest was the Twilight, another side-wheeler that made daily trips up and down stream."

Among other boats whose names recall memories are: the "Columbia" that first plied between Philadelphia and Bristol, a side-wheel ship, which eventually ran to Trenton; the "John A. Warner," the "Pekanoket" which saw years of service; the "Long Branch," a stern paddle-wheeler; the "Nellie Bly," the "John Taylor," "Springfield," which made many stops including Bristol, and which is now doing duty on the Hudson River at Poughkeepsie.

In later years the Dolphin Line served people along the Delaware, and then the Trenton-Philadelphia Steamboat Company. The former line operated the "Queen Anne," "Trenton," "Springfield" and the "Dolphin." On moonlight nights the "Queen Anne" was used for excursions.

In conclusion the author bemoans the fact that "with so delightful a pastime at their very doors it does seem unfortunate that Trentonians no longer have a trim little craft to take pleasure-seekers on a few hours' sail or a moonlight excursion."

He's Out for Double Win in Trotting Classic

With advent of August and the seventh annual renewal of the famous $60,000 Hambletonian Stake for three-year-old trotting horses, owners and drivers throughout the country are girding for the most colorful spectacle in light harness racing. Chief among the most serious contenders for the rich purse this year is William H. Cane, master of the Good Time Stable and president of the Goshen, N. Y., Mile Track Association, scene of the contest. Cane is causing the field more than ordinary concern because of his avowed intention to capture the Hambletonian a second time this year and so lend new impetus to his life ambition of twice winning every honor in trotting. He won the Hambletonian in 1929, has annexed all of the other ten honors once and has already captured five of them a second time. Upper right shows Mr. Cane clocking one of his entries (upper left), and lower panel shows the finish of the 1931 Hambletonian.
